Details of the Duel.

A dispatch from Waterboro, S. C., gives the following graphic account of the Harley-Fishburne duel in Georgia:

The arrangements were consummated in Georgia, and were as follows: Time of meeting, half past twelve o'clock p. m., Saturday, Jan. 12,, place of meeting, about one fourth of a mile above the intersection of the Atlantic and Gulf and Savannah and Charleston Railroads, in a pine grove; distance, ten paces; weapons, dueling pistols; to fire at the words, "fire, one, two, three, halt or stop," between "fire and

The pistols were furnished by Mr. Harley. They were regulation dueling weapons, but were found to be unequal in size, weight and bore. In consequence of this Mr. Fishburne's friend claimed the privilege of taking his choice of the two, as they had been furnished by the opposite party, to which Mr. Harley consented, remarking that he did not care which he had, but he did not intend to allow any loophole for escape. Mr. Fishburne's friend received his pistol at the Pulaski House, Savannah, at about 9 o'clock a. m., and at about 10 the party started for the ground, reaching it at about half-past 11. On the ground it was ascertained that the pistol chosen by Mr. Fishburne's friend was choked up by some hard substance, probably an old load. After repeated efforts by Mr. Fishburne's friend to remove the obstruction, Mr. Harley was informed of the fact. Mr. Fishburne's friend had in his possession a Colt's navy revolver. It was suggested that this and the duelling pistol that Mr. Harley had be placed together, and the choice be tossed for. Mr. Harley declined acceding to this, and proposed instead that Mr. Fishburne use the revolver that his friend had, while he would use a Smith & Wesson revolver that his friend had. This was agreed to. A half hour was spent in making these arrangements. At this iuncture a disinterested gentleman present, who had never before seen either of the parties, approached Mr. Fishburne, and inquired if the matter could not be amicably adjusted. Mr. Fishburne replied that any arrangement that would be satisfactory to his friends would be satisfactory to him. The same gentleman then approached the opposite party with the same inquiry. Mr. Harley replied that he had called Mr. Fishburne a — coward in South Carolina, and that he had come to Georgia either to prove him a --- coward or leave his bones on the soil. Finding his endeavors fruitless the mediator retired, first returning to Mr. Fishburne with the information that his efforts were fruitless.

At 1 o'clock the principals took their places ten paces apart, no one else being then present except their friends and surgeons. It fell to Mr. Fishburne's friend to give the word. The question was asked: "Gentlemen, are you ready?" Mr. Harley replied, "I am." Mr. Fishburne replied, "Ready." Both principals were cool and collected. Mr. Fishburne's friend stepped half way between the two and said: -"Gentlemen, take warning. I am about to kinds, of Country Produce solicited. Special give the word, but before doing so will repeat it. It is, 'Fire. One, two, three.— Stop or halt.' You are to fire between the words 'fire and three.' 'He then stepped back and gave the word:—"Gentlemen, are you ready? Fire! One, two, three!" repeating the words slowly, but leaving little interval between the last two. Between the words "one and two" Mr. Fishburne fired, Mr. Harley staggering and firing his pistol at the same time, his ball passing over Mr. Fishburne's head. Immediately after firing Mr. Harley fell. Mr. Fishburne at once left the ground, leaving the surgeons and Mr. Harley's friends in charge of him. Mr. Harley was shot in the lower right side of the abdomen, the ball passing through his body. This is the second member of this family who has lost his life in a duel. Thomas Harley, his brother, was one of a large party of Southerners who moved from Charleston to Texas at the close of the war. He had been in Texas but a short time before he became involved in a quarrel. A duel was the result, and Thos. Harley received a wound from which he died soon afterward. Col. Harley, the father of the family, was known as an uncommonly passionate man. At one time he became enraged at one of his female slaves, and at once sold all of her children to punish her. In her sorrow and anger she cursed her master, telling him that the children of a man so merciless as he would surely come to some bad end. Walter, the son who has just been killed, was commonly considered the best member of the family.

RICE IN INDIA .- The most important Indian export is from Calcutta. The whole of Bengal proper, or the great alluvial and deltiac plain between the Himalayas and the Bay of Bengal, and the Provience of Orissa, or the alluvial territory between the hills and the sea connecting Bengal with Madras-a level area of nearly one hundred thousand square miles, uninterrupted by a single hill, rich in black mold, and of boundless reproductive fertility, subject to recurrent inundation, and enjoying natural facili-ties such as no other country in the world possesses for internal commerce and irrigationconstitute the great rice producing area of Northern India. Bengal is one vast rice field.

In the autumn months the whole country stem sown with rice; the early crop stands thick and yellow on the high lands, while the lower grounds are waving with a wide and unlower grounds are waving with a wide and unbroken less of green. The surplus produce of this area finds its way, generally speaking, to Calcutta. In a period of unique pressure, such as the present, the railway is used as a means of conveyance, but ordinarily it may be said that the whole of the supply of rice is brought down along river routes. These natural communical tions afford every facility for transport, and not tions afford every facility for transport, and nowhere in all India is internal traffic more active than it is in Bengal when the rivers are full of water, when every river is turned into a high way for the country craft, every stream into a pathway and every creek into a harbor for

From Burmah, too, there is a prodigious export of rice, exceeding even the surplus of Bengal in bulk. The amount of land under rice cultivation is increasing, and vast tracts have lately been reclaimed from waste by the Government embankments of the Irawaddy; the population is augmenting rapidly, and the demand for rice for export is of progressive growth. The consumption is extending in England, on the Continent, and in America, and as long as Burman can manage to supply rice at a profit at rates not much above those now existing, there seems little ground for apprehending any falling off in the demand. Almost the whole of the Burmah rice goes to Kurope.
